Catrin's story

Catrin and her friends were terribly excited! They were building mini-beast hotels in school. Mrs Jones had asked the class to bring bits and bobs in from their gardens to make the hotel an inviting place for the mini-beasts to live in. Catrin and her chameleon, Carlo, had scoured the back yard the night before and she had brought in some oak leaves.

"These should be right at the front of the hotel," Catrin announced to her friends. "Because they're the best."

Janey had some moss, Niall had some birds' feathers and Roxy had some twigs. They all thought that their resources were the best. What a to-do! They all got very cross and shouty with one another and in the end, they stormed off to make their own separate mini-beast hotels.

An hour later, Catrin looked at her rather sad hotel. It only had leaves in and, to be honest, it was rather boring. She looked enviously at Janey's moss, Niall's feathers and Roxy's twigs.

"Hey guys," she called. "I was really stupid before about my leaves. Shall we all get together and make a hotel that the mini-beasts will LOVE?"

Luckily, her friends agreed, and before the end of the lesson, they were gathered around their brand-spanking new hotel. It was crammed full of feathers, twigs and leaves and it looked wonderful.

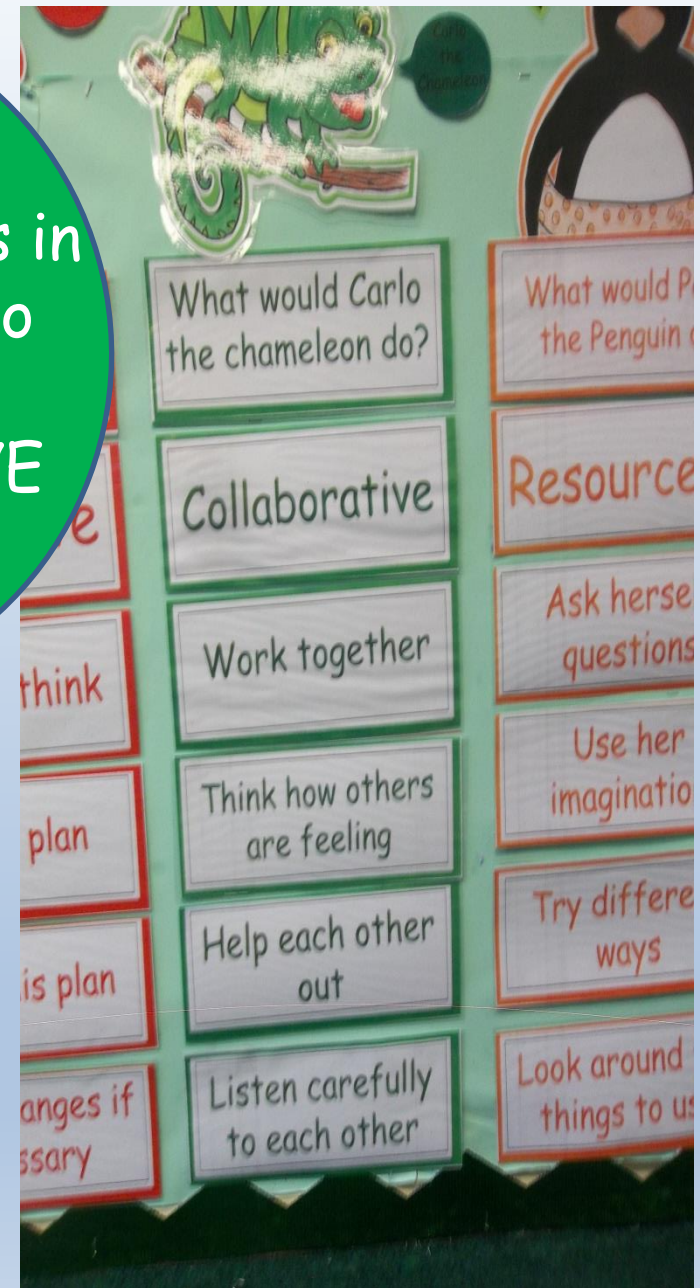

As they watched, they saw two little ladybirds fly into one of the rooms, making themselves right at home.

"Look what we've done by working together!" exclaimed Catrin.
