Resourceful Rhodri

Rhodri

"Have you done that homework yet, young man?" Rhodri's Mum shouted up the stairs. Rhodri clutched his Xbox console and gulped. He'd forgotten all about his World War Two research project.

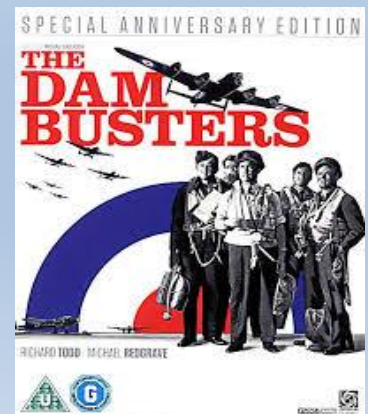

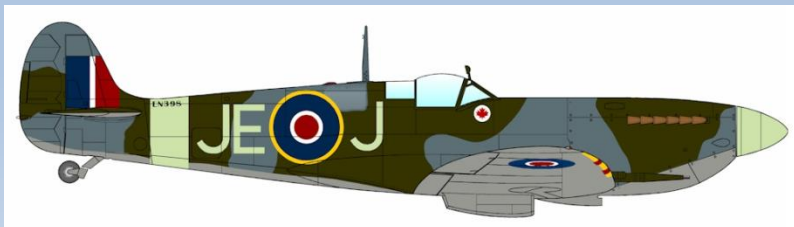

In a panic, he ran over to his computer. But nothing happened; it was broken. "Oh no!" he groaned. "What am I going to do now?" The bookshelf! Perhaps he could use the Big Book of Facts he'd been given for Christmas. But that was gone! His sister must have taken it to school. Now what was he going to do?

He could feel butterflies flapping around in his tummy. His teacher would go mad! But just as he was about to freak out completely, he caught sight of his neighbour, Mr Gibbs, pottering in his garden. Mum had mentioned once that he'd flown aeroplanes in the war.

He ran downstairs, calling out to his mum, "I'm just popping next door to talk to Mr Gibbs."

Moments later, he was sitting on the grass listening to fascinating war stories about Spitfires, Dambusters and bouncing bombs. He scribbled notes in his book as quickly as he could.

When he gave his presentation the next day, his teachers said she was very pleased how his information with such a personal response. But Rhodri, was even more proud with the way he had been resourceful... his computer had broken, his book was missing but he still managed to find the information himself and he hadn't given up.
